RFID

RFID is a technology that uses radio waves to identify and track objects. It is used in many applications, including access control, inventory management, and supply chain tracking. RFID tags are small electronic devices that can be attached to objects and can store information about the object. The information can be read by a reader device, which can then be used to identify the object. RFID technology was first developed in the 1940s, but it was not until the 1990s that it became widely used. Since then, it has become an essential part of many industries, including manufacturing, retail, and logistics. RFID technology is still in the early stages of development, but it has the potential to revolutionize many industries. As the technology continues to improve, it will become even more widely used and will play an increasingly important role in our lives.
